_____

I sharpened a Maestro Wu folding knife to shave ready using the WEPS Chosera 1K, 3K, 5K, and 10K stones and finishing with Ken Schwartz's .125 CBN. This is the shave - videos of me sharpening the knife are coming next!

Next up is the actual tutorial! This is part 1, where I introduce the stones, and discuss lapping/cleaning along with accounting for the angle differences between the stocks and the Choseras.

_____

Part 2 actually sharpens a knife from 400, 1K, 3K, 5K, and 10K Choseras, finishing with .125 CBN and leather.

It's long, but I didn't edit out the beginning few stones so that you can get an idea of what really happens. Later grits are edited for time reasons.

Just got done watching your vids Tom... excellent info! I realized my primary mistake when trying to get a "shave ready" edge was that I was using too much pressure and too many strokes. Question... after the end of the sharpening process (the 2nd vid) did the edge pass the HHT? I saw you just checked it on a napkin... but it looked like it shaved real well in your shaving video. Is that all you did to it?
