test
Posted by admin - 12 Jul 2012 11:13

---

test

==========

Re: test
Posted by mark76 - 12 Jul 2012 11:56

---

admin wrote:

test

Hey, are you Clay in disguise or a hacker?

==========

Re: test
Posted by wickededge - 12 Jul 2012 12:22

---

mark76 wrote:

admin wrote:

test

Hey, are you Clay in disguise or a hacker?

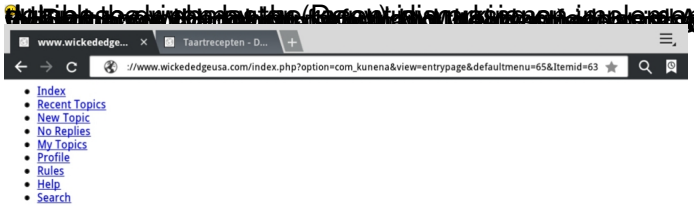
I think the webmaster (Dany) is working on implementing some really cool changes to the knife database driven by the recent discussions.

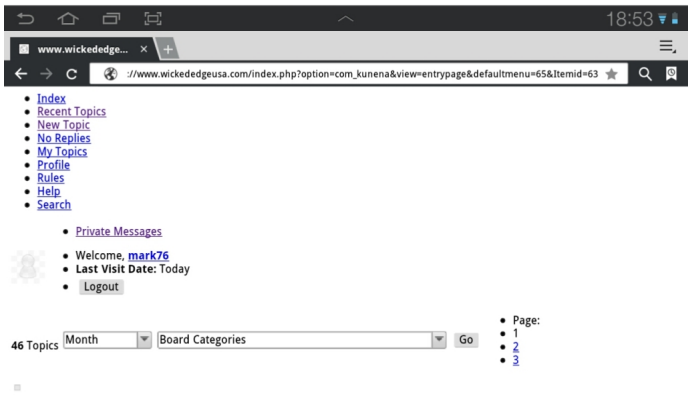
==========

Re: test
Posted by mark76 - 12 Jul 2012 12:49

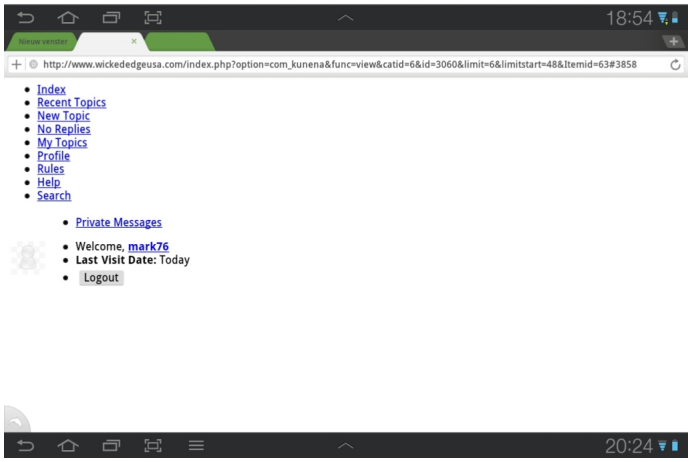
---

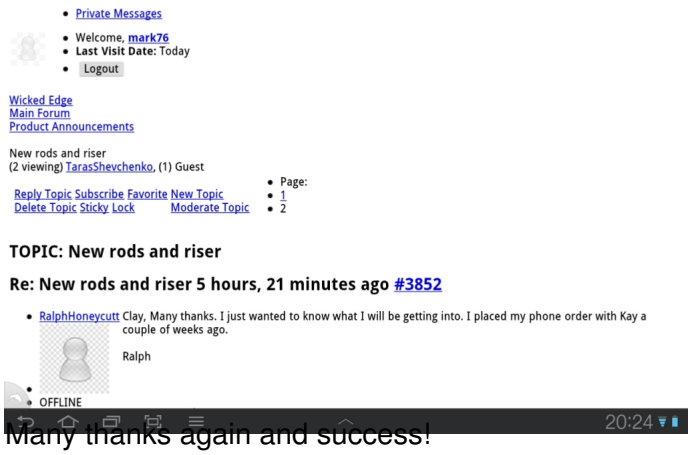
wickededge wrote:





Recent Topics





Many thanks again and success!

==========

Re: test

Posted by mark76 - 12 Jul 2012 12:51

_____

And this is what I saw on my desktop computer a minute ago when I tried to post the previous message.

==========

Re: test

Posted by admin - 12 Jul 2012 13:07

_____

Hi Mark,

We are going to migrate the site over to a new server that should help with the speed. We moved it over a little while ago, but an issue with the forum came up shortly after and we thought it was server related, but turned out to be a javascript conflict with the new database.

I will post on here when the migration is complete and if you see the same issues after that we will address them.

Thank you for your feedback.

Dany

==========

Re: test

Posted by mark76 - 12 Jul 2012 13:44

Hi Dany, thanks for your quick reply. Keep up the good work. And success with the migration!

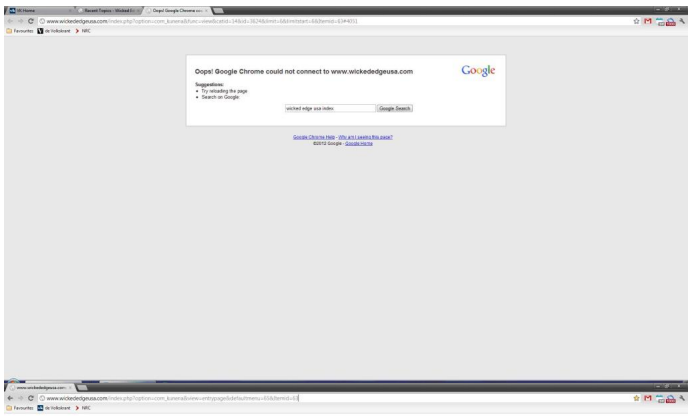
==========

Re: test

Posted by mark76 - 25 Jul 2012 03:52

Just in case it is of any use, here a few more error messages I got recently. Last night around 22 hrs (GMT +2) the site was unreachable for about an hour from where I live.

I'm obviously not the technical expert here, but one thing I noticed (and which is substantiated by some of the error messages) is that the delays/errors often occur when there is database access. So maybe separating the database from the web server is sufficient and not the entire site needs upgrading to (a) new server(s).



Oops! Google Chrome could not connect to www.wickededgeusa.com
Google
Suggestions:
Try reloading the page
Search on Google:
wicked edge asa index
Google Search

==========